Director's Report

What a year it has been so far. When we left you last, we were getting some renovations to the Museum. Just when we were about to open, 2020 had other ideas instead. It hasn't been easy being away from our normal runnings of the Museum but we've taken this time to work on other projects and rethink what the future may hold for education and Museums as a whole. As of right now, it's seems unlikely to have field trips on a normal basis in the Fall. We've been working hard to reimagine our field trips to go online and digital for schools while still offering tangible materials to work with. As we continue to flesh out the details of how we adapt to change, we choose to see these obstacles as opportunities for change and growth. As the wise and famous Bob Dylan said, "You better start swimming or you'll sink like a stone, for the times they are a-changing." Our Mission here has not changed nor has our determination to fulfill it in every regard. At this time, it is more important than ever for community members to come together to support one another. The Museum is happy to announce our soft reopening on Tuesday, June 30th so we may continue to be there for you.

Archaeology News

With newer advanced Ground Penetrating Radar, archaeologists have been able to map an entire Roman city without breaking any ground. Falerii Novii in Italy was first built in 241 BCE (Before Common Era). Monuments, temples, public spaces, and even water systems were completely mapped out with the advanced technology. Although GPR is not new, this is the first time it has been used in such a vast discovery with so much detail.
